

CSC 111 Important Terms and Definitions

Last Updated: 8/23/2010, Alphabetical Order

Processing – a high level programming language which supports developing visually-oriented programs program – a collection of instructions executable by a computer which, when executed, are intended to solve a problem of interest statement – a single instruction in a program, usually separated by a semicolon